HOME DEPARTMENT

Blue Springs, she has a host of friends among the young people of Kansas City and Independence, having been a frequent guest at the home of her aunt, Mrs. J. C. Pendleton, of Independence. Mr. Montgomery is cashier of the bank of Blue Springs, and is well known throughout the county.

Miss Nettie Mock, in compliment to Miss Alice Chappell and Miss Belle DeLong, or Lexington, Ky. It was a white and green luncheon and the round table was covered with an embroidered cloth. In the center, a silver candelabra bearing green tapers rested on a round mirror wreathed in ferns. At the corners of the table were large bowknots formed of rare ferns, each, knot holding two white orchids. White roses were strewn over the table's surface, and white roses were placed at each cover. The Kansas City Keramic Club will give a reception and exhibition at the Midland hotel on Wednesday and Thursday of this week from 19 a. m. to 19 p. m. The club were strewn over the table's surface, and white roses were placed at each cover. Throughout the menu green and white prevailed and the cream was green and white, frozen in true love knots. The place cards were white etched in green.

After luncheon the guests engaged in a puzzle contest, for which heavy white cards etched with green were used. The prizes, too, partook of the chosen colors, for one was a picture of the Castle of Chillon framed with a green mat, and the other a bust of Michael Angelo. The guests were:

Miss Chappell,

Miss Sue Barse, week from 19 a. m. to 10 p. m. The club was organized a few months since, and this is its first exhibit, yet it already has fifty members, besides a large waiting list, and includes the most talented of the city's china painters, among both professionals and amateurs. It follows that there will be much beautiful and interesting work on view on this occasion.

fir. W. Rankin Hendy, who has just taken his degree at the University Medical college in this city, left yesterday for San Diego, Cal., where, on May 19, he will be united in marriage to Miss Carrie G. Frost, formerly of Emporia and Leavenworth. Miss Frost is a graduate of Wellesley and has many friends in Kansus City. Dr. Hendy is a Harvard graduati and has been a resident of this city for some years. Dr. and Mrs. Hendy will live in Chicago, where they will be at home to friends at 137 East Thirty-fourth street after June 1.

The marriage of Miss Laura d'Isay and Mr. J. Evans Lippincott, of Alexandria, ind., was solemnized Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac d'Isay, 438 Spruce avenue. The house was darkened and lighted with candles which shed a soft radiance over the wreaths and banks of spring flowers and the green palms and trailing asparagus fern. The house was embowered in bloom. The entrance hall was decorated with apple blossoms and blooming branches were twined about the balusters of the staircase and tied with large bows of pink satin ribbon. The punch table stood in the hall, before a recessed window filled with violets and ferns.

The celebration of the mariage of Miss Alice Chappell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Chappell, and Mr. Jannes DeLong, of Lexington, Ky. Wednesday evening. April 26, was the occasion of an ideally beautiful home wedding. Invitations were extended to relatives and intimate friends only, yet so large is the number of those who may be so designated that the spacious home on Pendicton avenue was thronged with guests at the appointed hour. 7 o'clock; many coming from out of town.

Mrs. Chappell, Mrs. DeLong, the groom's mother, and Mrs. Hal Gaylord received the guests in the drawing room, which was decorated artistically with pink roses and palms. Mrs. Chappell wag handsomely gowned in black silk tisue, veiling black liberty silk, the skirt trimmed with deep flounces and the bodice relieved by a crush front of white liberty silk and point lace.

Mrs. DeLong wore a stately gown of heavy black silk net over black silk; a deep flounce, en forme, finished the bottom of the skirt and was trimmed with sathnedged ruches of black mousselline de sole. heavy black slik and cop flounce, en forme, finished the bottom of the skirt and was trimmed with satinged ruches of black mousseline de soie. The bodice had shirred elbow sleeves and was slightly decollete, a beautiful imported garulture of dull jet bordering the round neck and covering the front. Mrs. Gaylord's gown was of white actin with a flounce of white accordeon pleated mousseline de soie trimmed with double ruffles of mousseline completely velled the skirt. The square-cut bodice was also of renaissance lace. As Zimmerschied's orchestra played the Mendelssohn wedding march, the grooms mea. Mr. Seth Serat. Mr. Bird Megarvey, Mr. Joseph Guthrie and Mr. Sam Ragiand, formed an aisle of satin ribbons from the stnirway to one conner of the library, where a semicircic of tail palms was thickly set with stately Easter lilies.

The bridal party descended the stairway,

Mrs. George Mathews was the hostess of a most enjoyable card afternoon at the Washington Thursday. The long drawing room was decorated with tulips and buttercups and the beautiful summer gowns and hats of the guests vied with the bright colors of the blossoms. A very pretty wedding was that solemnized on Tuesday evening at the Forest Avenue Christian church, in which Miss Rachel Luella Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Hall, and Mr. Orville M. Robinson were the principals. The church was well filled with friends and relatives. Promptly at 8 o'clock Miss Ella Devine sang. "You," very effectively, and a little later the wedding party entered the church to the strains of "Lohengrin," played by Mrs. Blanche Oglebay-Schilling. The cermony performed by Rev. Mr. A. W. Kokendoffer, was short but impressive. The bride was prettily dressed in a gown of white mousseline de sole, and wore a veil held in place by a single rosebud. She carried a bouquet of bride roses tied with white ribbon. The attending maids, Miss Maude Baker and Miss Gertrude Sims, were daintily attired in dresses of white organdie and carried pink carnations tied with pink ribbon.

Mr. Walter Hair acted as best man. Mr. Draper Robinson, Mr. Will Hall and Mr. D. O. Herndon were ushers, The church was decorated with palms.

A reception followed at the home of the bride, 724 Tracy avenue, where about fifty friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson gathered. A number of handsome presents were received. In the floral decorations of the house, the plnk and white effect was carried out, white roses and pink carnations being used. Palms formed a bower around a table from which ambrosia was served by Miss Tracy Devrick. Vocal and instrumental music was rendered by Mrs. Schilling and Miss Devine. Mr. and Mrs. Roblinson will be at home at 724 Tracy avenue, after May 15.

ART NOTES.

John S. Ankeney has at Findlay's a canvas done during his student days at Paris. It is a scene of a little French village painted with that warmth and artistic taste that has distinguished all the work that Mr. Ankeney has shown here. E. A. Burbank, the distinguished Chi-ago artist, was in the city a few days ago, guest of Mr. Van Millet. He has been making some studies of Indians in the territory and expects to work this summer among the Sioux Indians at Pine thidge. Mr. Van Millet has just finished a por-trait of Mrs. Block, also of Judge Crayens, for the library.

An interesting exhibition of water colors by Dutch, French, English, Italian and American artists is on at Swan's gallery. Hartzou, a Dutch artist, is especially well represented by a number of Holland scenes painted in a technique peculiarly his own. E. Ruppe, another Dutch artist, has also some good Holland landscapes. The Italians are well represented by two strong bits of colors from the studio of Mazini and two Venetian scenes by P. Sala. There are, too, landscapes by C. Palianti and a marine by P. Galter. G. S. Walter, of the English school, has two marines carefully painted; George Oysten, whose work is well known here, has an excellent twilight effect. There are a good marine by Haquette, two by Bauer and several examples of L. Timmerman's work. Thomas B. Craig, the Canadian animal painter, has a large water color, but it is much less effective than his oils. Miss Jean Waters, daughter of George N. Waters, the distinguished artist, has several very carefully painted scenes. There is one charming bit of color by A. J. Miller, called "The Entrance to An Inn at Toledo, Spain." The work of Charles Partridge Adams, of Denver, is sure to attract attention from its excellence. The same may be said of two exquisite pieces by H. Stacquet. There are some pictures by Thomas Jones and by Thomas Pine, which are good in drawing, but harsh in color and composition.

The London correspondent of the New York Sun writes: The "press view" of the Royal Academy exhibition was given to-day. It is the opinion of a majority of the critics that the exhibition is one of the weakest in many years. There are hundreds of mediocre paintings, while quite a number are absolutely bad.

Ed. noteworthy portraits, those of Octavia Hill. Jane Evans and Mrs. Charles Hunter. Edwin Austin Abbey exhibits two charming paintings, one of which. "Who is Sylvia?" is a fascinating, golden-haired figure. The other, "Oh, Mistress Mine." represents a pair of lovers meeting in the cloister of an Italian church. Mr. Broughton shows an early Dutch skating scene, and another picture of a wintry spring. Frank Millet is linely represented by one of his best works, "The Traveled Man." showing a sixteenth century traveler engrossed in writing and surrounded by trophles of his wanderings. James J. Shannon has four brilliant portraits, the subject of one of which is "The Babes in the Wood." a low-toned, decorative and delightful presentment of wee toddlers. George Hitchcock exhibits a small canvas entitled "The Hyacinths Are Coming."

The most striking of the English exhibits is Byam Shaw's "Love, the Conqueror." Among the landscape painters Alfred Parsons and Alfred East are easily foremost. Among the 2,000 paintings exhibited there is nothing else worthy of mention.

WOOLENS IN SUMMER. Moths Will Get at Them Unless Early and Careful Preparations

Are Made.

This is the time to put away heavy furs beginning to fiy. If furs and clothing are put away with moth eggs in them, all the odors in the world will not save them, as any furrier will tell you. The time when the eggs are laid is when the warm spring days come and the heavy garment is hung in the closet, but not put away for fear it may be needed again. Then perhaps it is worn once or twice and then hung up again, and in the hurry of spring work forgotten until moths are noticed. Then the furs are taken out hastily, perhaps brushed a little, and then put away smothered in camphor or something else as useless and expensive. In the fall when the clothes are days come and the heavy garment is hung in the closet, but not put away for fear it may be needed again. Then perhaps it is worn once or twice and then hung up again, and in the hurry of spring work forgotten until moths are noticed. Then the furs are taken out hastily, perhaps brushed a little, and then put away smothered in camphor or something else as useless and expensive. In the fall when the clothes are taken out there is a wailing and nobody can understand how it happened when the clothes were put away so carefully and such a lot of moth stuff used.

The proper way is to lay the heavy clothing in a chest as soon as it is not in daily use, but so that it can be taken out and worn when cold days come. When the cold weather is quite gone, then every article should be taken out and hung on the clothesline on a clear day; if there is any wind, so much the better, as the dust will blow away. After beating with a light switch of some kind brush the clothes carefully. Never put clothes away with solled spots on them. Scour them all out. When all the clothes are beaten thoroughly and brushed and cleaned, fold each article separately, and with care as to the folding. Then see that there are no cracks in them anywhere. If there are, paste newspaper over the cracks and see that there is not even the smallest crevice for the moth to enter, for if there is one she will them anywhere. If there are, paste newspaper over the cracks and see that there is not even the smallest crevice for the moth to enter, for if there is one she will surely find it. Wrap up each article separately, either in old sheets or in old towels or in papers; see that all are absolutely clean. Pack them in with care, so that they will not be crushed or wrinkled, and spread a sheet over the top and tuck it in closely all over the things. Close the chest, and, if there will be no need to open it during the warm season, paste paper over the edges of the cover. But if it closes tightly there will be no danger, from moths. That is the whole secret of keeping woolens safe from moths.

Carpets will be quite safe if turpentine is poured about the edges after each sweeping. If the house is to be closed, sweep all the rooms with great care, put away all the heavy curtains and everything woolen that can be put away and saturate the edges of all carpets thoroughly for about two inches deep. Turn the chairs up and pour turpentine into the seats from the under side. Close the house as absolutely as possible, and if all this is done carefully and systematically the carpets will be uninjured.

The woman bent on saving herself time and trouble in future labels plainly every box and package which she will have no occasion to open until autumn. She is careful also when using naphtha or other inflammable liquids not to do so in the evening or in the daytime if a light is burning unprotected by a shade nearby.

An Eccentric Woman.

The mother of Poulteney Bigelow, the schoolmate of the emperor of Germany, who wrote a book about him, was a remarkably eccentric and outspoken woman. At one time, when her husband occupied a diplomatic post in France, the emperor Napoleon III. placed the imperial box at his service for an evening. For some reason or another the Bigelows could not attend the opera that evening, and therefore Mrs. Bigelow sent her servants to occupy the box. The sensation caused by her action in diplomatic circles may be imagined. Mrs. Bigelow once made a remarkable visit to "Oulda" at her villa in Florence. On sending in her card, Mrs. Bigelow overheard the authoress saying: "No, I will not see her. Tell her I can have nothing to do with Americans." Thereupon the visitor waxed indignant, and walking into the room where "Oulda" was, she exclaimed: "Won't see Americans! Why, miss, we are the only people who buy and read your nasty books." Instead of being angry, "Oulda" was charmed with the freshness and audacity of her visitor, and begged her to come and stay at her villa, for she would like to make a study of her. The invitation was declined.

Philippine Wedding Custom.

When a Philippine woman of better class gets married she sometimes wears as her wedding dress a costume of native manu-facture that reaches in value up into four igures. It takes months to make a hand-kerchief or a sleeve, so microscopic and delicate is the fabric.

WHERE SINGERS GROW.

OVER EGELHOFF'S.

The Mississippi Valley Seems to Have the Atmosphere in Which

They Thrive. Somebody has discovered that there is nysterious quality in the atmosphere of mysterious quality in the atmosphere of the Mississippi valley that is highly productive of comic opera singers. Nearly all the queens of the American light opera stage are from the country that is watered by the Mississippi and its tributaries. St. Louis properly and naturally takes the lead as the home of American opera singers. Among the notable representatives from this city are Della Fox, Dorothy Morton, Nellie Braggins, Fatmah Diard, Louise Eissing, Cecille Eissing and Adine Bouvier.

Alice Nielsen was born in Nashville, Tenn., and reared in Kansas City. Lillian Russell is a product of Clinton, Ia., where as Nellie Leonard she was a playmate of Jessie Bartlett Davis. Helen Bertram's birthplace was Paris, Ill. Marguerite Reed, a favorite in London, was bred in Indiana. So was Thea Dorre, a most excellent Carmen. Hilda Clark is a native of Leavenworth, Kas. Pauline Hall—nee Schmittgall—first saw the light in Cincinnati. Ada Somers, Mabella Baker and Catherine Linyard are three "beauts" from Illinois, Jennie Dutton and Minnie Methol were born in Davenport, Ia.; Mae St. John in Richmond, Ind., and Lulu Glaser in a little town on the Allegheny river. Marcia Van Dresser is a native of Memphis, Tenn.

There are probably others, but those named should be enough to convince the most hardened skeptic that Mississippi valley ozone gives girls good voices as well as good looks. the Mississippi valley that is highly produc

Maybe She Was Fooling.

Just before Princess Charles of Denmark went to the Mediterranean she was in a railway terminus receiving a distinguished guest, when she caught sight of a reporter scribbling notes as fast as he could. For a moment the eyes of the princess met those of the writer, and directly afterward he saw that she, too, was writing in a small notebook. She tore the leaf out, screwed it up and threw it on the platform, and the reporter picked it up. The words penciled on it were: "I wish I were a reporter!"
